Small steps. Lifelong protection.

Our childhood & adolescent vaccine policy

Every milestone matters: the first smile, the first day of school, the first steps toward independence. At Passion Health, helping your child grow up healthy means protecting those moments. Vaccination is an essential part of that commitment.

Our recommendation is clear.

We recommend routine childhood and adolescent immunizations in accordance with the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) schedule. Your child's clinician will review which vaccines are due, consider their health history, and explain any recommendations that require an individual decision. Vaccines help protect your child and people who are especially vulnerable to infection.

Your questions belong here.

You deserve clear answers about benefits, expected side effects, and uncommon risks. Please share concerns, past reactions, or information you have seen online. We will listen respectfully, explain the evidence, and give you reliable resources. Asking a question is always welcome.

Timing is part of protection.

We recommend vaccines at the advised ages and intervals. Delaying doses or spreading them across extra visits can leave a child unprotected longer. We do not recommend alternate schedules for convenience or preference. When a medical precaution or contraindication applies, your clinician will adjust the plan and document the reason.

Behind on vaccines? Let's make a plan.

Bring any available vaccination records, including records from other clinics or countries. We will review them and recommend a catch-up plan when needed. If cost, access, or a missed visit is creating a barrier, tell our team so we can help identify next steps.

If you choose to delay or decline.

Your clinician will discuss the risks, document the conversation, and may ask you to sign a vaccine refusal acknowledgment. If you continue to refuse recommended vaccination despite counseling, we will ask you to transfer your child's care to another practice. Any transfer will include written notice and an appropriate transition period under applicable requirements.

Help us care for every family.

Tell us about significant reactions after vaccination. If your child may have been exposed to a vaccine-preventable illness, call before arriving so we can guide your visit and help protect other patients. Keep your child's vaccine record and share updates from other healthcare providers.

Our shared goal: a child who feels supported today and stays protected for the years ahead.
